ROSES, PEONIES, IRISES, PERENNIALS

SHERBROOKE'S GLORIOUS ROSES

They may well be regarded "The World's Finest" which is not an extravagant claim. The majority of the varieties are universally grown and popular in favorable rose growing sections of the United States and Canada as well as in Europe and Australia.

No section of the world produces finer plant specimens than those grown in our Pacific Northwest.

This list of varieties is the result of thirty years' experience in testing, eliminating and selecting the best from the thousands of new roses introduced by the foremost American and European hybridizers. So why not "The World's Finest?" The claim is justified.

PRICES

Well grown, carefully dug, vigorous 2 year old field grown plants.

50 cents each for selected FIRST GRADE $5.00 per dozen

35 cents each for a lighter FIRST GRADE 3 for $1.00

(Patented roses as marked) Parcel-post prepaid on orders of $2.00

Lower priced plants may be had at bargain counters but they are not cheaper. Usually not freshly dug and roots are left unprotected.

PATENTED ROSES

Many of the newer roses have been patented by their introducers and sell for $1.00 each and upward.

Some are especially good, others not so hot, so until their popularity or demand is established I do not stock them but will obtain plants specially ordered.

ORIENTAL POPPIES

Gorgeously decorative and perfectly hardy. Plant a few of the modern varieties NOW while partially dormant. Remember they can NOT be moved in the spring when in full growth. Poppies do not transplant well except when dormant.

Queen Louise. Lovely salmon to coral pink. Most popular.....	15c to 50c
Powhattan. Very dark rich crimson	25c-50c
King George. Large, deep rich red.....	50c
Wurtembergia. Very large, deep oxblood red, simply WONDERFUL.....	50c

SHERBROOKE'S SUPERB PEONIES

Peonies are the hardiest of hardy perennials and are not adapted to warm climates. Although I am growing about 200 varieties and many worthwhile un-named seedlings, I am listing only the most beautiful and satisfactory varieties in the order in which they bloom in my garden.

By selecting early, mid-season and late blooming varieties the blooming season is extended over many weeks.

Prices are for strong, 3 to 5 eye commercial divisions from three year old clumps with fresh solid vigorous root system. These are much superior to divisions from old hollow crown exhausted clumps usually offered by the "cheap Johns," and which may take years to recover their vitality.

Do not expect much from newly planted roots, the first flowers will not be typical as it takes a season or two to become established.

PEONY CULTURE

SUCCESS with Peonies follows only when we meet their requirements, a well drained fertile soil (a little clay helps) not too close to large shrubs, trees and hot walls and with at least a half day sun.

Plant in early autumn with the eyes or sprouts not more than two inches below the surface after allowing for settling of the soil, keep the surface loose and free from weeds and grass and do not overwater, a good soaking once a week in dry soil is sufficient.

Fertilizers should be used sparingly and carefully. A double handful of bone meal and ground lime rock mixed with the soil at planting time will carry them along a couple of years.

Animal manure, unless well rotted and incorporated with the soil in advance of planting time, should not be used and never in contact with the roots.

After two years it may be applied between the rows but not near the stalks, in early spring, then forked lightly below the surface.

BUT MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL, good healthy roots should be obtained from a grower making a specialty of growing Peonies.

Cheap roots are freely offered and there is usually something wrong with them, shy blooming, improperly handled, very often diseased and seldom give satisfaction. Avoid disappointment and regrets by starting right with healthy vigorous roots at a fair price.

After blooming season is over, remove the faded flowers and seed pods. The tops must be left on to prepare for next season's requirements, the foliage being the lungs of the plant. Late in the fall, when it has ceased to function and the tops collapse, cut them down close to the root, remove and burn.

Colors may be intensified and preserved by cutting the blooms when the outside petals loosen up, allowing them to open slowly in a cool shady place with stems in deep cool water.

In cutting, leave enough stem with foliage on the plant to mature the eyes or sprouts for next season. The cut buds should have all the lower foliage removed to prevent evaporation and wilting, leaving only enough foliage to appear well above the container.

PEONY FAILURES

Did you know that there are thousands of "BUNK" Peonies in circulation? Well Smith has grown them for years, cannot get them to bloom. They are passed on to Jones, who, after six or eight years of failure gives or sells them to Brown, cheap, with same result. If divided at all they are attacked with a spade instead of with a sharp knife, their bruised and mutilated remains are then buried deeply at the wrong season and then he wonders why his Peonies do not bloom.

People, every year, in spite of FAIR WARNING, buy the cheapest roots they can find from any old "cheap john" or bargain sale, plant them any old way at any old season and spend their remaining days wondering why their Peonies do not bloom.

Lower prices will be offered on larger lots. Please submit your list for special quotation.

DUTCH IRIS BULBS

Planted in groups of one color, effective decorative results may be achieved with little expense. If you are not familiar with these exquisite little cut flower Irises you are passing up a real pleasure. Try a few dozen for fall planting.

JAPANESE IRISES

The growing demand for these tall stately Irises will be met in my extensive collection, probably the finest in the West, most of them propagated from original Yokohama Nursery Company's finest productions and carried under their original Japanese names.

Color range from pure white, light and dark blues, rose lilac to dark purple. Some with six petals, others three.

Owing to the difficulty in describing and naming I will not list them here. Color plates of most of them may be seen at my office.

NO LIME should be used where they grow, they prefer low, sour soil.

Price 25c for liberal divisions.

Come and see them while blooming.

SIBERIAN IRISES

Perry's Blue. A most popular sky blue, tall and stately.
Snow Queen. Pure white with deep yellow in throat.
Price 15c to 35c per division or clump.

IRIS GERMANICA

I expect to discontinue this class of Irises. I have many beautiful high class varieties which I will sell for 5c and 15c each, depending on quantity and variety wanted.

RANUNCULUS

The bulbs of this charming and brilliant summer flower should be planted in February, March or April, about two inches deep, in well prepared, fertile soil, full sunlight or partial shade. After the blooming season take up the bulbs, dry them well and store in a dry, cool place until next season.

My French-Persian hybrid strain, result of careful seed selection, is unsurpassed for brilliancy of colors and double flowers—very few singles.

Plant them where you want them—they do not transplant well. In dry, sandy soils they should be mulched to conserve moisture.

Dry bulbs 40c per dozen; $3.00 per 100. All colors mixed.

AN INVITATION

Come to the gardens during the blooming season, usually early in June.

Select the varieties that appeal to you in color, fragrance and price. I will be glad to keep your list and notify you when planting time arrives, early in September.

GARDEN CLUBS especially invited.

Birthday, Anniversary and Christmas Gifts. (A suggestion.)

Say it with flowers or plants. A fragrant rose bush or peony root. Nothing could be more appropriate for those interested in gardening.

ASKING A FAVOR

In case you are not interested in increasing your planting in the near future, won't you please pass this price list on to a neighbor or friend. I thank you.
